

Conspiracy on Callisto - Frederik Pohl <https://www.gutenberg.org/ebooks/62476> Revolt was flaring on Callisto, and Peter Duane held the secret that would make the uprising a success or failure. Yet he could make no move, could favor no side—his memory was gone—he didn't know for whom he fought! Prison of a Billion Years -CH Thames <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/32150> A prison that it is literally impossible to break free from? How could this be? Watchbird - Robert Sheckley <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/29579> Machines that can accurately predict when crimes will happen? What a great money spinner? But where's Tom Cruise when you need him? The Incomplete Theft - Ralph Burke <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/65659/> A grand new spaceship, tech that could win the war for the thief's planet! Infiltrating the construction team leaves but one task... The Barbarians - Tom Godwin <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/59447> An intergalactic emperor finds dastardly HUMANS entering his space. What to do? Bleekman's Planet - Ivar Jorgensen <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/65666/> A retired cop wants a quiet retirement, so he chooses to emigrate to the most isolated inhabited planet of them all. Little does he know who's REALLY in charge down there... The Inquisitor - Randall Garrett <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/65728> A machine that can judge criminality? Well, if it's a machine, it MUST be flawless. Traitor's Choice - Paul W Fairman <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/66753> A terrible dilemma: tech to destroy the world, or your wife. Hunting License - James V. McConnell <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/66570/> We really ought to let the mega rich have their fun. And we can get rid of those nasty criminals at the same time. Morality? Nah. Bratton's Idea - Manly Wade Wellman <https://www.gutenberg.org/etext/64789> Hey, doll...wait, doll's don't talk...or shoot... - Summary by The Reader
